Automation offers accurate accounting and planning

Business efficiency should be based on simplicity. A complex finance system that does not communicate with the rest of the operation can lead to high administration, frustration and costly errors. What you need is a core accounting system that can work transparently with the rest of your applications and/or departments, which at the same time simplifies planning and transactions management.

With bluQube's "off-the-shelf" Integrator tool you can eliminate any duplication or re-keying of data because all transactions feed directly from external sources into the core accounting system, using a single automated process which is both on-line and in real-time, and requires no manual intervention whatsoever. This means that you don't have to set aside several days to re-key or update information with the possibility of mistakes.

And with tools such as Journal Upload you can read and create reports from spreadsheet based information, simply by importing it into the main system. Again this reduces the strain on human resources and allows you to use existing information to help with a wide variety of tasks such as costing, loading aggregated transactions and re-charging costs to cost centres or departments. Not only does bluQube help manage day-to-day transactions, it also makes it easy to create budgets in both the short and long-term. Plan Upload enables you to seamlessly upload multiple plans and estimates developed in other formats such as Excel to automatically create a wide range of budgets and financial plans to improve control over expenditure.

Why repeat the same task twice? bluQube has been designed to integrate an unlimited number of applications into a single financial package - providing real-time, on-line integration without customising third party applications. Quite simply, bluQube does the work so that you don't have to.
